Honorable Supervisors,

I write to express my concern that companies wishing to continue to drill and extract oil/natural gas be carefully monitored by the County of Ventura, as well as the State of California. These companies should be held to modern safety and environmental standards. Conditional Use Permits need to be reevaluated and updated to meet current standards that protect public health and safety, and address climate impacts of oil production.

The climate crisis is real. Oil companies must be held responsible for potential threats to people, land, air, and water.

All new drilling and expanded extraction should require a new permit and require compliance with our current health, safety and environmental standards.

We put our trust in you. Thank you for your work and for keeping our county safe and healthy.

Sincerely,

Carrie Glicksteen
